To the Independent Electors of the City of Sydney.

GENTLEMEN, in compliance with the urgent solicitations of many of my friends, I hasten to announce to you my intention of coming forward, at the necessary juncture, as a candidate for the honour of representing your interests in the New Legislative Council; and when I shall have briefly unfolded to you my views and motives for so doing, I trust you will not hesitate to secure my election, by your votes.

My views are taken from the present formidable aspect of public affairs. My motive is to the utmost stretch of my ability, to do you essential service.

Gentlemen, your city, in common with the rest of the colony, has reached a critical position, and must rapidly retrograde if inefficiently represented in the forthcoming Council. It will be wise therefore of you to confide the duty of representing your interests to men of known judgment and sound principles; to men not of words but of deeds; not to "mere men of straw," but men of substance—in short, to men who know your true interests, and who will honestly maintain them. Of this class of men I protest myself to be—and on my ability to convince you of my possession of those indispensable qualifications it is, that I ground my claim to your confidence and support, as well as my own hope of promoting your political welfare; for although the new Act of Parliament certainly goes far from conferring that extent of popular representation which the present critical circumstances of the colony so imperatively demand, yet in efficient hands, with independent, energetic elective members, it may, to my thinking, be rendered an instrument of much general good.

Gentlemen, I have now dwelt among you nearly thirty years, during which, I believe, you will acknowledge that I have spared neither exertions nor capital to advance the public interests at the same time with my own, in promoting the useful arts, trade, and manufactures of your city. I have no private interests to gratify that are not identified with yours. I have no public interests to serve but yours. I am neither a place holder nor a place hunter. I want not any Court favours. I profess to be no wordy theorist, but a practical utilitarian. I profess no more than what I mean, but can be staunch to what I do profess.

If you feel, Gentlemen, that these are legitimate causes why I may reasonably claim your confidence, it only remains for me to ask of you to put me to the proof, by granting me your triumphant support at the approaching election; and in the event of your returning me as your representative in the first Legislative Assembly of the colony—believe me, it shall be my most anxious endeavour to support, as far as my experience and ability can further the great ends I have in view, each measure that may be brought forward, no matter by what individual or party, having for its object the public good of the working classes, and the encouragement of colonial manufactures in particular. Be assured I shall be always found at my post, and on the alert to give my most unflinching and determined opposition to any attempts that may be made, from sinister motives or otherwise, to stifle or counteract such measures; convinced as I am, that on them will depend the vitality of the colony.

I shall do myself the honour of canvassing you all, personally, and in the mean time remain, Gentlemen, Your most obedient servant,
ROBERT COOPER, Senior.
Ormond House, December 26.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SUN.

Sydney, May 19, 1843,

SIR,—I should feel very grateful to you by giving the following lines publicity in your widely circulated Journal, and as it may be important, not only to teetotallers, but to all who are, or may be in a state of sickness, or otherwise requiring medical assistance, the undermentioned fact can not be too well known. My object in addressing you is to show, that the use of wines or spirits to a person in such a state is useless. Nay; worse than useless, as I have seen in a case which has lately come under my observation. I refer to Mr. Henry Moreton, a strong teetotaller, whose every nerve is strained in the cause. From an injury received when a boy, he was very severely troubled with Carcinoma of the testicle; so much so that he came to the determination to undergo a painful operation to have it extracted, and I am glad to inform you and every one, that he has not only undergone the operation, but is now walking out, it being only ten days since the operation took place. But what I have said is nothing when compared with the fact, that all the while he tasted no wine nor spirits; although by not doing so, he went against the wishes of some of his medical attendants. They were Drs. Duigan, Russell, and Stewart, of whom too much in the way of commendation cannot be said, not only as regards skill, but also unwearied attention. To Dr. Duigan in particular, (who performed the operation in the most scientific manner,) all praise is due. I also beg to state, that although one of these Gentlemen wished Mr. Morton, shortly after the operation, to take a little wine, his answer was, "No! I am a Teetotaller;" and on that account would not taste a drop. And what was their encomium on Mr. Moreton on the evening of the same day? Why, that they were extremely glad, when they heard from his own lips, that he had not so much as touched the pernicious stuff. No, his mind is fixed on the total annihilation of that which has so strong a tendency to sap the foundations of religion and morality. You will see him again coming forward with new strength, wielding the sword of Teetotalism in the one hand, and the banner of love in the other, and telling to the world the good effects of Total Abstinence. Yours, &c., AN OBSERVER.

THE APPROACHING ELECTION.

CAPTAIN O'CONNELL.

As the dawning of a new era in Australian annals is about breaking into sunlight upon us, and the time for activity, determination, and honorable rivalry for the suffrages of the people is at hand, it becomes our duty to consider, in common with our contemporaries of the press, the most proper course to pursue, and that which will redound most to the dignity of the state and the security of the Public, in our choice of representatives for the maiden House of Elective Assembly for New South Wales.

In reviewing the merits and demerits of the candidates for the representation of the City, we are not influenced, as has been alleged, (we believe) by any such sinister motives as the hiring portion of the press, whose injudicious advocacy is doing so much injury to the interests of their employers, are actuated by—and were we base and unprincipled enough to prostitute our pen to so unworthy a purpose, we flatter ourselves we possess the tact and address to conceal, at least, our "secret springs of action," from the world's broad stare; and to escape the condemnation and contempt, which some of our senior contemporaries have incurred, owing to a deficiency of the qualifications, indispensably requisite to the successful advocacy of a bad cause!

The candidates in the field, are Messrs. Wentworth and Bland, Hustler, Cooper, and Captain O'Connell, of whose various qualifications, no one can possibly form any estimate, as they never had an opportunity of testing their political honesty (which, with us, is a sine qua non—superior far to the empty elocutionary displays, or flatulent declamatory addresses of soi disant "gentlemen and scholars" like Wentworth and Bland) in an Elective House of Assembly. But, from the public career of some of them amongst us, we can form a pretty accurate notion of the principles by which they would be guided, were they elected to a seat in the House of Representatives.

Mr. Hustler and Captain O'Connell are mere strangers, sojourners in the land, and "birds of passage," without a stake in the Colony, without experience, practical knowledge, or even years to recommend them. Truly, we want not greybeards any more than striplings. We know that Pitt was only five-and-twenty when he electrified the assembled Parliament from an obscure corner of the House, under the gallery, by a spontaneous burst of Demosthenic eloquence, such as those walls had ever, until then, been strangers to; and that, when taunted by his opponents, with a lack of years, he replied, with great good humour and characteristic good sense and truth, that their objection to him was one which, he was happy to say, time was daily removing. So it may be with these two youthful aspirants; but the odds are one hundred to one, that neither the one nor the other will turn out a Pitt, a Fox, or a Burke. Experimentalising in a maiden Parliament, hazardous as it is, at all times, and in all places, would prove a safer remedy for our monetary epidemic, in the hands of age and sound practical experience, than when entrusted to young gentlemen of high classical attainments, or tyroes in either forensic or heroic oratory. The mimic stage, in our humble judgment, is better suited to the development of their elocutionary abilities, in the respective addresses of Sempronius to the Roman Senate,

"My voice is still for war"— or Cicero to the Conscript Fathers, than they possibly could be on the real stage of human life, in the important part they are ambitious of appearing in, to

"Fret away their hour, and be forgot."

But, if either are worthy of having so solemn a trust as the guardianship of the lives and liberties of Britons, in this remote and anomalously-constituted community, reposed in them, we cannot hesitate, for one moment, to pronounce the gallant Captain the most eligible, associated as he has been, from infancy and family connexion, with Australia, the land of his birth; and with Ireland, the land of his affection and proudest boast! He is a young man of liberal education and superior attainments; his courage in the tented field having been tried and proved on the plains of Hispaniola, to be equal to his prudence and discretion in the councils of his commanders. He has an easy natural flow of language; his delivery is pleasingly distinct, clear, and classical. As an orator, Captain O'Connell will assuredly excel, when he shall have acquired sufficient confidence and practice before a large assembly, to enable him to proceed without a certain degree of embarrassment, which is generally characteristic of modesty and moral worth. Upon the whole, Captain O'Connell has the reputation of being a clever young man, giving hopeful promise of eminence and distinction; when maturer years, experience, and a critical observation of passing events shall have refined his judgment, and stored his mind with data and precedents of political and moral research, to ponder and improve upon.

We propose scrutinizing the claims of the various candidates, and, if possible, presenting them to our friends, in an impartial light, notwithstanding the calumnies of their enemies, the Herald and Australian.
