Re: 297.1-297.8 Relative Index

Overview

This exhibit contains the Relative Index entries for the expanded schedule 297.1-297.8 Islam in EPC Exhibit 134-11.1. No mapped LCSH or BISAC headings are included because most are not relevant to schedule changes, and the few that are have not been moved. The following codes are used in the draft Relative Index:

- E Proposed electronic-only entry
- N Approved electronic-only entry
- P Proposed print-and-electronic entry

Entries not preceded by any of these codes are approved print-and-electronic entries.

Parts of Koran

We are unsure how best to index parts of the Koran. We have proposed print-and-electronic index entries only for the broad numbers 297.12242 Texts of parts of Koran and 297.12272 Commentaries on parts of Koran:

Suras (Koran)

Arabic text	297.122 42
commentary	297.122 72

We have proposed electronic-only entries for the subdivisions of 297.12242 Texts of parts of Koran. In the attached Relative Index they appear as placeholders for discussion, not as precisely what we will use in the end. These entries follow the patterns of LC authority records, e.g.:

Koran. Juz' al-Ḥamd	297.122 421
Koran. Sūrat al-Aḥzāb	297.122 425

Of the 30 parts (Juz'), we have proposed an electronic-only entry only if there is an LC authority record for the part. We have proposed an electronic-only entry for each sura (Sūrat) in suras 1-49, but have proposed entries for suras 50-114 only if there is an LC authority record for the sura.

The LC authority records rarely give alternative forms except for entries giving the part or sura number, e.g.:

Koran. Juz' I
Koran. Sūrah XXXIII

That kind of alternative form does not seem useful, and we have not given it. When a variant form of name for a part or sura is given, the entry always begins with "Koran," e.g., Koran. Juz' Alif Lām Mīm. We might consider giving that kind of alternative if we find one with much literary warrant; there is none in the attached draft.

All the Relative Index entries for individual parts or suras should logically have the subfield “Arabic text” because that is what the numbers mean and because the absence of such a subfield incorrectly identifies the Arabic text number as the interdisciplinary number. In the schedule, we have not identified an interdisciplinary number for parts of the Koran; we relocated seven different aspects of parts of Koran to seven different subdivisions of 297.122 Koran from the old interdisciplinary number for parts of the Koran (297.1229). The Arabic text numbers are used for number–building but cannot be the interdisciplinary number because the schedule clearly says that texts accompanied by commentaries are classed in 297.1227 Commentaries (see reference at 297.1224–297.1225 Texts) and Arabic texts accompanied by translations are classed in 297.1225 Translations (class–elsewhere note at 297.1224 Arabic texts). The closest to an interdisciplinary number for parts of the Koran is 297.12272 Commentaries on parts of Koran, but that is too narrow—and 297.122 Koran is too broad to be useful. One possibility would be to give both the Arabic text number and the commentary number for each part that is indexed, and give no number directly opposite the name of the part, e.g.:

Koran. Juz’ al-Ḥamd
Arabic text	297.122 421
commentary	297.122 721
Koran. Sūrat al-Aḥzāb
Arabic text	297.122 425
commentary	297.122 725

The Arabic text numbers can also be used for building numbers for translations of parts of the Koran, but only after the Table 6 number for the target language has been inserted, e.g., English translation of Sūrat al-Aḥzāb 297.12252105 (built with 297.1225 Translations plus T6—21 English plus 5 from 297.122425, as instructed at 297.1225). Because of that number–building pattern, there is no way to give a specific Relative Index entry for translations of a specific part of the Koran.
